Case Study

PROJECT NEEDS

Confidential healthcare organization needed a new Long Island office that would strike the right balance between collaboration, privacy, and employee well-being. Their goal was to create a 20,000-square-foot workplace that could support both teamwork and focused individual tasks. This required a thoughtful mix of open workstations, private offices, huddle rooms, and collaborative areas to give staff flexibility and choice in how they worked.

SOLUTIONS & RESULTS

The completed design has delivered a workplace that elevates the employee experience while aligning with the organization's core values. The overall atmosphere supports collaboration, focus, and well-being, directly reflecting the company's mission of advancing community health. In addition, the project is on track to achieve Fitwel certification, reinforcing the organization's commitment to creating a healthy, sustainable, and future-focused workplace.
